Gould Scores

At Rumford Carnival

The Gould Winter Sports team consisting of John Fox, Emil Johnson, Frank Cousins and Charles Burnham, made a very good showing at the Rumford Carnival last Monday. Johnson was high point man for the Gould team scoring 9 points by taking three second places in the long distance Ski Race, in the Ski Jump and in the 100 yard Ski Dash. Johnson also ran another on the Medley team and came through with a strong finish, helping the team win second place. Johnson was surpassed in scoring honors by only two men in the meet, Aldrich the much talked of Norway star with 11 points, and Shiekis of Rumford with 15 points.

John Fox came through in fine style, running first place in the 2 mile race. Fox ran a great race and clearly showed his superiority over the other contestants and slid home the ski champion of the year for that distance.

In the long distance snow-shine race Frank Cousins came in second being beaten by Ashton of Norway.

In the snow-shine dash, both Cousins and Burnham qualified for the finals, but missed scoring by placing 4th and 5th.

In the Medley Relay, two men running on snow-shoes, and two men on skis, Norway was first, Gould second, and Rangleway was third.

There were eleven schools entered in the meet and Gould with its total of 21 points placed third. Rumford won with 27 points, which were scored entirely in the skating events, and Norway was second with 26 points. As this is Gould's first year at Winter sports the team made a very creditable showing.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

OXFORD COUNTY SECOND IN STATE FOOD CONTEST

Women all over the State are talking, have been talking, and will keep on talking about "Square Meals for Health," the state-wide foods project, carried by Farm Bureau organizations in Maine.

To promote the serving of well planned community meals was the object of the project. Each community serving eight approved community meals under certain other contest rules was awarded a certificate by the State Federation of Farm Bureaus. To the county who did the best job was awarded the State charter. Oxford County, by receiving 20 community certificates, won the State charter with Oxford a close second with 19 community charters.

Miss Evelyn Avery, State Foods Specialist, comments on the achievement of the county very highly. Out of only 21 organized communities in Oxford, 19 won certificates, or over 90 per cent of the communities where Farm Bureaus were organized. This happens to be the highest county percent in the state.

Another contest is on, for 1928 and Oxford County is in it. Already 17 communities have signed up for competition and others are expecting to enter later. House Burned

At North Newry

About two o'clock, Monday P. M. smoke was noticed coming from the chimney of Frank Douglass' house in Newry. The house was unoccupied, but Mr. Douglass goes there quite often from his home in Grafton after hay, so no alarm was felt as it was thought he must be there. At about three the house was completely burned inside and began to fall.

G. H. Learned with what help he could summons succeeded in saving the barn which is full of hay. The cause of the fire seems an entire mystery. There was no insurance.

L. A. Edwards, Pastor. Sunday, Feb. 10th, 1928, 10:45. Morning Worship. The pastor will present the seventh of the series on the Character of Jesus. The subject being, "His Optimism."

There is an Imitation Optimism, there is also a sane Optimism. The man who falling from a ten story building shouted to his friends as he passed the fifth story "everything is all right so far" had little regard for the inevitable.

Jesus lived amid conditions that to the average man would have been most depressing, but in spite of all he lived the triumphant life. His heartening challenge to His disciples then and now, was and is, "Be of good cheer."

At this service we shall have special music; but the music that the congregation contributes is, for them the most important. We urge you to make the singing of the hymns a real act of worship.

The church school is growing in numbers and interest. We

We agree with you that almost everywhere you go, you need money in some form or other—cash in your pocket is necessary up to a certain amount, but—you need not carry any surplus around with you. And why should you when you can write your check for the exact amount that is needed?

Convenience and Safety are two good reasons why you should have money in the bank rather than cash in your pocket.

There are many other reasons; come in and discuss the matter.

The POLICY of PROGRESS

A STATEMENT
by
GENERAL MOTORS

IT is the policy of General Motors to maintain continuous improvement, in every one of its car divisions, with no interruption in production.

This means that you enjoy the benefits of new engineering developments promptly—just as soon as they have been thoroughly tested on the 1245-acre Proving Ground.

It means that you can now order the new Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac, or GMC Truck, and receive immediate delivery.

Behind this policy of continuous improvement is an organization so widespread and resourceful that it can make and sell quality automobiles more economically than any automobile manufacturer in the world.

In the north and south it logs and mills its own lumber. In the east it makes its own ball bearings and radiators. In the middle west it produces its own plate glass. Its plants are busy in 33 important American cities.

From almost 5,000 suppliers, its materials are obtained—steel by the hundreds of thousands of tons—wire by the tens of thousands of miles—upholstery by the acre—nuts, bolts and washers by the millions. Its sales and service take place through 33,000 dealers. More than 275,000 families look directly to General Motors for their livelihood—almost a million and a half men, women and children in every community in the land.

Meaning so much to so many, General Motors has felt a supreme obligation to look ahead.

Are there methods by which General Motors cars can be better built to better serve?

Are there new ideas which can increase the utility and pleasure and safety of motoring?

Are there new materials which can add to owner satisfaction?

Such are the questions that all General Motors engineers have always asked. The answers have made it possible, year after year, to offer an increasing measure of beauty in design, modern performance, riding comfort and distinct style. Thus in every price class, from Cadillac to Chevrolet, purchasers are constantly benefiting from the General Motors policy of progress.

Hand helped with the Christmas party plans. On little white cards, with candelas and holly, they printed the invitation.

Aunt Almira's Christmas Party at the Lone Pine Christmas Eve Five O'clock.

Just one week before Christmas, the badlong boys waited through the snow all over the forenoon end of the island, and delivered the invitations, one to every house. It could not have been more than ten minutes after she received the announcement that Alice Andover was to be seen smiling grandly up the hill, a sort of full-blown majesty in her advance. Gay sat her beneath the pine.

"Now don't blame me. I hadn't a thing in the world to do with it. I only lent her the cottage as she asked. She did everything herself. She sold everything she owns to pay for it, and it isn't going to cost you a cent. She has gone without jelly, gone without butter, gone without cake, gone without sugar—it's her party, and none of our business, if you ask me."

Alice Andover sank weakly into a chair. "I might have known it. That's the thanks I get. That's how folks take to good, honest, conscientious administration. And then the audacity to invite me to the party."

"Oh, please come! She'll be so disappointed if you don't come. She wants you to see how cleverly she has managed."

"Oh, I'll come. And since she's got the unmitigated audacity to have a Christmas party in spite of my orders, I'll send my presents as usual. Oh, I always give little things—people been here for years—all in the family, you know, and I being the administrator. So you can tell the foolish old woman I'll send my presents as usual. I've never missed one of Aunt Almira's parties yet, not since that first devil-scurd one fifty years ago when—"

"Oh, don't. She—she thinks maybe he is the Unknown Soldier at Washington, she—"

Alice Andover stared. She opened her mouth, closed it with great firmness and blinked hard at them.

"Unknown Soldier!—Good heavens. What next? Then she added humorously, with a bright glint in her gray eyes, "Well, whatever he is, thank God, it is unknown. That's all I've got to say for Buddy Bridges—Unknown Soldier."

The next day Rand climbed the tall pine and strung it with Christmas lights from topmost point to lowest branches, round and round, a hundred little colored bulbs, and connected them to a switch beside the window where Aunt Almira could turn it on before the party. Aunt Almira was exultant with the idea of wiring the tall pine; she had not dreamed of such royal welcome to her Christmas guests. For days before the party she talked of little else.

It was only three days before Christmas, the twenty-second of Deember, in the thick darkness of the early evening, that Randall Ingram came again.

He entered hurriedly, his manner gave the first hint something was amiss. He glanced over his shoulder nervously, and closed the door behind him swiftly.

"I shouldn't have come," he began hurriedly. "But I had to. I came to see the first hint something was amiss. I glanced over his shoulder nervously, and closed the door behind him swiftly. Your feet have been in my eyes, your voice rang in my ears, the light in your eyes—"

"After Ingram," she said with pretty dignity, "don't do that. I assure you I do not like it."

"Oh, you think I am charming. But I mean it. I—Miss Delane, tell me if I should sell out—all my interests—my business connections—would you—marry me? Would you even think of it? I know it is too soon for you to know— But would you let me come where you are, let me see you, try to make you love me— Is there any chance for me at all? I would have some money. I could take care of you. We could go any place—West, or to Europe, anywhere."

There was no doubting the sincerity of his words, the eagerness of his desire.

"Don't," Gay said gently. "You will spoil our pleasant friendship, and I have liked it. It is because you have been away, you have been lonely, perhaps worried. It isn't really I you want. Why, you don't even know me. It is just—woman, companionship, sympathy, and things. That is all."

But he shook his head, clung to her hands. "Gay, it is you. Nothing else. Nobody else. You. From the moment I saw you down in the cave— Oh, I know you don't love me now—but couldn't you? If I get things all straightened out, and—do something else— Gay, isn't there a chance?"

From somewhere down the line sounded the low area of a car.

Randall listened a moment, but still clung to her hand. "Gay, don't say no. Don't say anything. Just wait, think of me a little, and as soon as I can—I will come again. But try to think of me—if not with love—at least with a little tenderness."

Quickly he lifted her hands, palms upward, kissed them passionately, one after the other, crushed them to his face and went away.

Gay sank into the big chair and buried her face in her arms. A criminal! That artless, boyish, ingenuous man, with the pleading voice and the eager eyes! But even a criminal deserves some kindness of thought from the woman in whom he gives his love. Gay was very kind.

The next day, very early, Rand appeared at her door, dressed roughly for outdoor winter weather in heavy oilskin coat and breeches. He was hurried in manner, preoccupied. He told Gay he was obliged to run down to Boston for a few days on business.

"Now you sit tight while I'm gone," he cautioned her. "I'm on the trail, and I'm going through with it. I've told the folks I'm looking for a job, and they won't expect me home until they see me. You just wait here. Say nothing to anyone. Do nothing. Don't set your foot in those woods under any circumstances. And at night, Gay, please, to please me, go down and stay with Aunt Almira. And don't worry, for I shan't be in any danger."

"You are not going to Boston," she said bitterly. "You are going into those woods, to lie under the pines and watch the elphouse, and try to catch those murderers. They'll catch you, first, Rand, don't, please don't. What business is it of ours if they break the law? What are their affairs to us? Why should you risk your life?"

"Oh, there's no danger, Gay, not a bit of it. I'll be careful, I promise you. Just a little weather eye out for squalls. No, I am going to Boston. I have gone to Boston. Get that in your mind, and stick to it. I shan't be able to write you, and I may not be home for several days. Just wait for me, and don't worry."

But Gay did worry, worried heart-breakingly. But she would not go to Aunt Almira. Rand might come, and she wished to be there, waiting for him where he left her. He might need her—a shot in the night, a scream of terror—Gay set her small stock head determinedly. Nothing, nothing in the world should keep her from going to him in answer if he called for help.

She was glad for the excitement of the Christmas preparations to occupy her hands, if not her thoughts, through the dreary days that intervened.

It never occurred to her that he would not be back by the twenty-fourth of December for the party on Christmas eve. But the morning passed, and he did not come. Gay had no heart for the laughter, the roving excitement of the island lovers, the dashed joyousness of Aunt Almira. Rand did not come. It would be Christmas eve, her Christmas eve, and Rand did not come.

At three o'clock Gay took Aunt Almira by the hand and led her down to the Apple Tree, where she put her bodily to bed, tucking the blankets about her and begging her to take a nap. She needed rest.

So it could have been but very little after three when the softly closed door of the Apple Tree behind her and set her feet in the path through the snow to the top of the hill. And standing up, ahead of her in the path, saw a man walking toward the cottage. Gay almost called out to him, expecting Rand, because she wanted Rand. But before sound left her lips she glanced the call. For she saw that it was a stranger, one who seemed to make his way unobtrusively in the face of the dark from the sea, stepping a little.

When he reached the piazza of the Lone Pine, he did not wait to knock, but opened the door slowly and went in, closing it after him. Gay was but a little way behind, and she ran in breathlessly, but stopped short in surprise when she did not find him in the living room nor the kitchen.

"Hello," she called. "Hello! Anybody up there?" But received no answer.

Frightened by the unnatural silence, and mindful of Rand's words of warning, she went to the desk, slipped her pistol deftly into the pocket of her heavy coat, and then she climbed the stairs, watchful and alert.

And there indeed she found him. Lying face downward on the soft rug of her bedroom floor.

"What are you doing?" she demanded coolly. "What do you want?"

He neither moved nor answered. So Gay went to him timidly and bent over him that she might see his face. His eyes were closed, his lips hard set. She tried to raise him, but his head fell limply from her hands.

She shrunk away from him, shuddering with fear.

CHAPTER XI

The crisp voice of Alice Andover had never sounded so sweet to Gay's ears as at that moment.

"Gay Delane! Where are you? I saw you take that foolish creature home, so I came to see if I could—What is the matter?"

Gay beckoned to her sternly from the top of the stairs. "Come up," she said, and her voice was hollow. "Come up."

Alice Andover was never one to hesitate in a crisis. She came at once, breathing hard. Gay pointed dramatically to the bedroom.

Alice Andover gave one wide-eyed glance and saw the prostrate form.

"Good heavens, oh, good heavens! Where did he come from—where did you get him—I mean?"

"He came up the hill just ahead of me. Walked right in. Came upstairs, and evidently fell down there. Or lay down. There he is."

Alice Andover crossed the room and stood above him, touching the inert body tentatively with the toe of her shoe.

"Drunk," she said disgustedly. "Dead drunk."

Gay breathed more freely, in some relief. "Oh, is that it?—I was afraid of—of terrible things!"

At that moment, spasmodically he moved, and his face rolled back into the light.

"Oh, oh!" Alice Andover's explanation was a startled gasp. "Oh, my God, I believe—Oh, poor Almira! I believe it is Buddy Bridges. Come home to his poor trusting mother—dead drunk. Oh, it is all my fault. Oh, what in the world have I done? Buddy Bridges—poor Almira. All my fault."

"Buddy Bridges? Oh, really? Oh, Aunt Almira—how happy—"

Then came sickening realization of the pain it would be to the little old woman to have him come home to her like this, dead drunk. Better a thousand times for her to live on in her trusting ignorance, fondly believing him an unknown hero, pure and free. "Oh, poor Aunt Almira! See here, Mrs. Andover, this drunken creature shall not spoil the poor dear's Christmas party. The way she has slaved, and saved, and starved herself— He shan't let her have one happy night—it may be her last, since Buddy came home like this. He shan't spoil it. Not if I have to poison him."

Alice Andover, trained to efficiency by years of hard administering, suddenly became practical and decided. Being in charge of things always aroused her latent cleverness.

Flint Axes of Stone Age Found in Sweden

The 4,200-year-old stock-in-trade of a Stone Age peddler in flint axes has been found by some workmen in a gravel pit in the Swedish province of Boendermanland. The peddler's hoard consisted of a number of light gray flint axes of exquisite shape and workmanship, evidently hidden in the ground by the trader, who seems to have wandered a long way from the south of Sweden to barter his axes for the precious furs of the hunters of the Boendermanland forests. The poor peddler seems to have met his death, for he never returned for his axes that now are said to be the best find of his kind ever made in that part of Sweden.

"We'll just roll him over in the corner out of the way," she said briskly, and cover him up with the rug, and let him sleep. It off. We'll lock the door, and keep him here till it is over."

"Will he stay drunk all night?" Gay asked. "Shouldn't we give him something?"

"Whiskey! I wish we had some whiskey. If we had time—maybe we could keep him drunk for a week. I don't know just how long it does last, but I know the party lasts all night. He may sleep it off."

"I have a little cognac. Brought it in myself—from Paris—in the top of my dancing slipper. Real stuff," Gay said proudly. "I was keeping it for a wedding, but he can have that."

ger, both doubtless inherited from the long line of seafaring ancestors. "We'll keep him as tight as a lord—until the party's over."

Carefully but sternly she rolled him over half out of sight beneath the window-seat, and covered him.

So Gay brought the precious unopened bottle of cognac, never yet unsealed, and they gave him a generous swallow, forcing the bottle between his teeth not without much difficulty. He choked over it and coughed painfully, while the conspirators held their breath in a panic above him. But presently he relaxed into troubled breathing again.

"That'll hold him for a while," said Alice Andover grimly.

They locked the door upon him and went downstairs. But when Alice Andover moved as if to go to her own home, Gay refused to be left alone in the house with the drunken creature upstairs, and Alice Andover was obliged to remain, fixing herself up for the party as well as she could with Gay's face powder and electric curlers. They had tea to strengthen their shattered nerves, and at five o'clock slipped up to the bedroom to give him another potent draught of the cognac. He swallowed this time with less difficulty, and as he drank, to their horror, his eyes opened, eyes large and dark, Gay noticed even in that horrible moment, eyes now visionless, not seeing. When the muffled heavy breathing recommenced, they slipped from the room.

Alice Andover, because the opening of his eyes had frightened her, was freshly furious. She shook her flat at the door when it was safely locked behind her.

Brooklyn Rookie Is Hard Hitter

IF MANAGER ROBINSON of the Brooklyn Dodgers had not secured Harvey Hendrick from New Orleans in the fall of 1926 he would have had the unique and most undesirable distinction of leading a club through last season without a single .300 hitter. This rookie was his lone representative in select hitting company. But wait! Can Hendrick properly be styled a rookie? In the first place he is too old for a rookie; being thirty years of age. Then he was up with the Boston Red Sox back in 1921. Then he spent two years on the Yankee bench, and after that went to Cleveland, thence back to the minors and then back to Cleveland again. And yet the season of 1927 marked the first appearance of Hendrick on a major diamond with any regularity.

Harvey Hendrick

Hendrick played 128 games for the Hobos last year and batted .328. Robble bought him for an outfielder, and there he placed him at the beginning of the season. But while his batting was up to par, his fielding was not of a nature to gain him space in the headlines.

By the time the season was a month old Babe Herman had slumped so badly in his batting that Robble was compelled to take this erratic young man out of the lineup and put Hendrick at first base. Hendrick continued to hit, but his first base play was short of major standards.

Robble was in a quandary. Carey and Stutz were two of the greatest outfielders in the business, and Fells was quite a fly chaser, but not one of this trio was hitting up to .300. Herman, the sensation of 1926, was still in a batting slump and his fielding was erratic. So Hendrick, the lone hitter on the team, had to stay in the lineup.

And he could run bases, too. This husky, supple young man from New Orleans stole 29 last season, being third in his league in that line.

What will Robble do with Hendrick next season? The fans are wondering. He has announced that Robinson is to have the first try at the initial sack. And then there will be Carey, Stutz and Tyson in the outfield. What position will that leave Hendrick to play?

"Hack" Wilson Performs

Well for Chicago Cubs

The saying "still water runs deep" might apply to "Hack" Wilson, the lucky outfielder of the Chicago Cubs. No one can say that Wilson is a flashy ball player, that his name should be mentioned in connection with some outstanding accomplishment, nor can it be said that he was at the inspiration behind the Cubs' success last year, and the big reason for their surprising showing.

When the Cubs took their first tumble as a casual review of Hack's hitting made the reason known. When he was hitting, the Cubs were up there challenging. He completed the season with a .317 batting average and shared with Cy Williams of the Phillies the National league home run honors.

But the bat is not all with Wilson. He can run in spite of his clumsy appearance and can go and get them at the outfield.

He started out as a catcher in 1921 with the Blue Ridge league, but the next year saw him in the outfield. In 1923 he hit .383 in Portsmouth of the Virginia league and earned himself a job with the Giants. He had a hard time connecting with big league pitching there and was released to Toledo in the middle of the 1925 season. He came to Chicago in 1926 in the draft.

Baseball Games in 1927

Baseball attendance soared to new heights during the 1927 campaign. Business Manager Edward C. Barry of the Yankees disclosed a total attendance of 2,240,000 at home games on the road. About 100,000 free passes were distributed for the three stadium and a like amount at other parks.

The Yanks broke their own mark in 1926 and in their travels, paid patrons to the stadium were 1,015, while away the total aggregated 882,081. The attendance for the Yanks surpassed that of the other clubs by more than 70,000. The Yanks set a new National league record with a patronage of 1,100,000 home in 1927.

Although the Yankees outdrew the other clubs in New York, the New York Giants were the bigger attraction on the road. McGraw's club drew more than 1,000,000 customers away from home because of the closeness of the National league race in which the Giants were contenders to the

Sport Notes

Boxing taxes netted the state of Massachusetts exactly $65,460.16 last year.

Earnings from all sources for Babe Ruth during the year 1927 are placed at close to $200,000.

Sweeney, a rookie with Detroit this year, got his baseball start on the sandlots of Cleveland.

A few more draws and the heavy-weight elimination tournament might well be turned into a battle royal.

There is a rumor that Moray L. Eby, once succeed Hunt Ingwersen as football coach at the University of Iowa.

Leo's Worthy, victor in the $50,000 Hambletonian stake, was the leading money-winner among the trotters last season.

University of Oregon varsity nine may visit Hawaii in June and play 20 games. Fifteen players will make the trip.

University of Illinois track team will oppose University of Southern California in a dual meet on April 7 at Los Angeles.

Charles W. Bachman, football coach of the Kansas Aggies, has resigned to succeed Tom Seeborg as coach at the University of Florida.

A special pari-mutuel department for women bettors exclusively has been installed at the Oriental Park race track, Cuba, following the example at Pimlico, in Maryland.

Although only twenty years old, Jack Duffy, Toledo boxer, has engaged in more than a hundred bouts in three years and boasts the remarkable record of having met defeat only three times.

Soccer, one of the oldest of team sports, is destined to become one of the most popular games within the next few years. In the opinion of William Jeffrey, coach of the Penn State varsity team.

We fondly look forward to the day when a baseball player is traded to another club and does not give out the information that "it had been a lifelong ambition of mine to play with the Blanks."

For every stomach and intestinal ill. This good old-fashioned herb home remedy for constipation, stomach ills and other derangements of the system so prevalent these days is in even greater favor as a family medicine than in your grandmother's day.

If Mothers Only Knew

Thousands of Children Suffer from Worms, and Their Mothers Do Not Know What the Trouble Is.

Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pale face, eyes heavy, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red spots on the tongue, starting during sleep with troublesome dreams, slow fever.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 502 Asylum St., Flint, Mich., writes: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and it was your laxative helped her."

Bearers of Great Names

William Shakespeare runs a saloon in London. He is one of the three men with that name who are registered in the London directories. One of the other William Shakespeares is a singer, while the third is a lawyer.

William Shakespeare, the singer, recently appeared on a concert platform with Francis Bacon, another noted vocalist.

A Shade of Hope

Doctor—Your husband is very ill—you can see that from his hands, which are purple.

Wife—But he is a painter.

Doctor—Ah, that might save him—if he hadn't been a painter there would have been no hope.

Blind Persons Sure to Travel in Circles

When a blindfolded person walks in what he thinks is a straight line, he is actually going in a more or less regular clockwise spiral, Dr. A. A. Schaeffer of the University of Kansas reported in describing new experiments before zoologists of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Doctor Schaeffer made more than 300 experiments with blindfolded persons on the open prairie of Kansas and Colorado, on the ice of a reservoir in Massachusetts, on a race track in Tennessee, and in a 100-acre field. The subjects walked, swam, rowed and drove automobiles blindfolded, and in each case they steered essentially the same kind of a curving path. Usually they started out with a straight stretch, and then began to turn in circles, and these circles usually became smaller in diameter.

Tim and the Pears

Thomas W. Lamont, the noted banker, favors reasonable publicity for industrial corporations, and at a luncheon before his departure for Europe he said:

"Publicity would do away with the corporations—few enough in number—that treat their shareholders as little Timmy tried his sister."

"Little Timmy came home and said to his sister:

"Mrs. Smith sent you five great big juicy pears for minding her baby. I ate two and lost one, and Bob and Dick swiped the other two."

Hamlet's Home Restored

Only the canopy taken to Stockholm by the conquering King Charles X in 1659 will be absent when the Kronberg castle at Oresund is opened as a museum.

Denmark's wonderful castle of the Renaissance—home of Hamlet—has been completely restored. Authorities are now ready with plans to refit it as a museum, with its old paintings, furniture and gobelins, these relics to be retrieved from the Danish museums.

"Oh, there isn't any proper thing to do in those circumstances. Anything he does will be wrong."—Stratford Beaconsfield.

So rapidly has demand mounted for the perfected Whippet, that four great plants—at Toledo, Elmir, Pontiac and Toronto—are taxed to capacity, and enlargement and expansion, to permit even greater production, are already under way. People continue to express amazement that cars of such remarkable quality and mechanical perfection can be offered at such low prices.

Here is true beauty—in color, lines, proportions and interiors. And here, too, are features which distinguish the finest American cars—low-slung full vision bodies, BIG 4-wheel brakes, gasoline tank at rear, full force-feed lubrication, silent timing chain, over-size balloon tires and snubbers and long semi-elliptic springs.

See this car—ride in it, and compare it with any other light car for looks, for performance, for quality, for all-around desirability—in short, for value.

Rejoiced Because
Stubborn Coughs
Disappeared Suddenly

If you, too, have a cough that hangs on and on, gives you nights of restlessness and days of torment you can get rid of it easily.

A real cough medicine, a standard of physicians, that acts in two ways at the same time will stop it or money refunded. It is called Adamson's Balsam.

Ingredients known to science as the best will act at once. They stop inflammation, break up the irritating phlegm, relax throat muscles, and of course your cough has to stop. Other curative elements go into the system and attack the germs in the infected membrane and in a day or two your cough and danger of weakness or serious trouble are gone.

Adamson's Balsam, for this reason, is recommended for the worst kind of stubborn coughs and for these it rarely fails. You should not cough another day. So why not try it. Will not upset the stomach and contains no dangerous drugs, dope or chloroform. Wonderful for children. You can say good-bye cough if you'll get Adamson's Balsam now. Any good druggist has it. Two sizes. 35c and 75c. adv
